A grand gold medal is offered by the Exposition for the best bale from any of the States.

WASHINGTON.

Internal Revenue Matters.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Revenue Supervisors Corwin, Fry, Dutcher and Sullen were consulting with Douglas, for means of a more efficient collection of the tobacco revenue.

The sentence of Santana and Big Tree has been commuted to imprisonment for life.

Bureau of the district revenue officers very generally ask for continuance of suits. Commissioner Douglas declines to accede to the demand, as the Government is determined to press the suit in all these cases.

The Press and Herald seeks to draw a parallel between "Tammany" and the failure of our late county Trustee to settle his indebtedness to the county. We fail to see it. Tammany has been defended by Democrats from the beginning, and almost to a man. Our defaulting Trustee has not been defended by his fellow Republicans. If any one has failed to do his duty in bringing him to settlement, let the blame fall upon him. Republicans are just as anxious as Democrats that he should discharge his obligations to the county. His bond, we presume, is a good one, and its conditions should be enforced. This is no more than we have said long since.

We are informed that a little boy—we did not learn his name—living on Cherokee Creek, in this county, was, on Saturday last, kicked on the head by a horse, crushing the skull bone in a shocking manner, and driving a portion of his hat into his brain, which had to be extracted by pieces. He was not expected to live.

Greenville Sabbath School Jubilee.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Sept. 15, 1871.

MESSRS. EDITORS: The writer awoke from his quiet slumbers at 1 o'clock on the 14th, and shook off drowsy sleep, in order to take the 2 o'clock train for Greenville. We reached that place a little after 6 A. M. We found a committee at the depot with carriages to escort the speakers expected from Knoxville. As they failed to come, we were placed in the carriage with Rev. W. B. Rankin, and drove to the hotel to enjoy a bountiful breakfast prepared by the ladies.

We found Greenville alive to the occasion. People came from the country in great numbers to join the schools of the city.

Thirteen schools joined in the procession, each headed with an appropriate banner.

Another bugle was sounded for the schools to fall into line:

1. The Rehoboth Sunday school has the first position of honor. It is headed by one of the most beautiful banners we ever saw, having for its emblem the Cross; its motto, "Feed my Lambs," encircled by the sweetest song that ever greeted mortal ears, sung by the angels more than eighteen hundred years ago: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will to men." Another was carried by this school, having our own chosen motto: "All for Jesus."

Then came the other schools, each carrying their own beautifully ornamented banner, as follows:

2. Gas' Bridge Sunday school; motto: "We Glory in the Cross."

3. Greenwood Sunday school; emblem: The Cross; motto underneath: "In Hoc Signo Vincas."

4. Mount Zion Sunday school: "Holy is the Lord."

5. Mount Bethel Sunday school; motto: "Stand up for Jesus."

6. Wells' Sunday school: "To the Cross we Cling."

7. 1st Cumberland Presbyterian Sunday school; motto: "Search the Scriptures."

8. 1st Methodist Episcopal Sunday school: "Enlist for Life."

9. 1st Presbyterian Church Sunday school; motto: on the one side; "Gethsemane," the other "Bethany."

10. Shiloh Sunday school; motto: "Mighty is the Truth."

11. Episcopal Church Sunday school; motto: "No Cross, no Crown."

12. Oakland Sunday school; motto: "Jesus Reigns."

Several other schools were in the procession that did not have any banners. The Greenville brass band took its position in front, and the grand procession marched to the sound of music to the beautiful fair grounds, followed by more than a hundred wagons and carriages, loaded with the parents of the youthful army, besides hundreds of others on horseback.

The time occupied passing a given point was one-half hour. On reaching the grounds the different schools filed into places assigned them in front of the stand erected for the speakers, where seats had been prepared, while the band occupied a stand at the right of the schools. After singing an appropriate hymn, a most fervent prayer was offered by Rev. S. V. McCorkle.

Other hymns were then sung by the schools.

The President of the Greene County Sunday School Association, Mr. Smith, made a short welcome address; and then announced Major McGaughey as the first speaker. The Major is one of the oldest veterans in the Sunday school army in Tennessee. He enlisted for the war in 1815, and has been a faithful soldier for over sixty-five years. He is one of the few who enlist for life in the Sunday school cause. He gave a striking contrast of the Sunday school of half a century ago, and of the present time, interspersing his remarks with lively anecdotes, that moved the vast audience to the best of humor.

Rev. W. B. Rankin made some appropriate remarks on "Christian co-operation in the Sunday school cause, and the importance of losing sight of sectarian issues to reach the neglected masses."

The Sunday school Missionary was then called out. He thought that as the old veteran oxen who had been invited to do the work of the day had failed to make their presence before calling on the steers, they ought to be fed. The hungry crowd listened with this view with a hearty good will.

The multitude was then dismissed for a little season, to dispose of Major McGaughey's sausages and the immense quantities of other "goodies" brought upon the ground. After an intermission of three-quarters of an hour, the bugle was again sounded, and the scattered hosts again rallied around the standard, while the band played some appropriate pieces, to aid in the digestion of the ample dinner that had so quickly disappeared. After vocal music, Judge Milligan, after frequent and earnest solicitation, came forward and made some timely and appropriate remarks on the relation of the Sunday Schools to the morality and welfare of the nation. Rev. Mr. Worthington was called out. He urged the friends of Bible Schools on a more earnest work in leading the children to Christ. The Sabbath School missionary followed in his usual effective style. Rev. Mr. Dobson made the closing address, urging parents and teachers to be true and faithful to their high and holy calling.

The music deserves special notice. It was conducted by Prof. D. C. Dukes, who visited the different schools of the county and thoroughly drilled the scholars in singing, so that, when they came to rally for the jubilee, they would be prepared to sing together. Of the many large gatherings of Sunday schools who have attended, never has it been our privilege to listen to sweeter music from so many "happy voices."

Altogether, the second Sunday school jubilee of Greene county was a great success. About twenty schools were represented on the ground. It was estimated, by good judges, that not less than three thousand people were present.

Had not the weather looked so unfavorable, it is thought that twice the number of schools and people would have come together to join in the jubilee.

All honor to old Greene! the banner county of Tennessee, in the glorious Sunday school cause. We would that other counties could be moved to imitate her worthy example, in bringing the Sunday schools of the county and towns together, and thus encourage the soldiers in the Sunday school army in bearing aloft the Banner of the Cross.

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear Thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth." Oh! that the different tribes of Israel were more united in displaying the "banner of truth," and less concerned about the low partition walls that divide them.

HERE AND THERE.

Dots Along the Kentucky Railroad.

The Kentucky Railroad runs from Knoxville northward to the nearest point in the Cumberland Mountains, and is now completed forty miles. Jacksboro', the county site of Campbell county, is three miles off the line, at its present terminus. This mountain village has about fifty houses—and two of them are doctor shops, six stores, three blacksmith shops, two carpenter shops, two churches, two school-houses, two taverns—with two hundred and fifty people to occupy them. A stage line connects Jacksboro' with the railroad. The vicinity of the village has chalybeate, sulphur, limestone and freestone water and iron ore.

Careyville, at the present terminus of the road, has twenty houses, six store houses, one blacksmith shop, a church and a school house. Prospects for improvement are flattering. Ten miles from Careyville, toward Knoxville, is Coal Creek Station, a thrifty village composed, principally, of miners, probably one hundred and fifty in numbers. About ten miles on down is Clinton, the seat of Anderson county, a drowsy little village of about fifty houses, three churches, six stores, an academy and a blacksmith shop or two. Ten miles this side of Clinton is Heiskell's Station with thirty-five houses, one church, two blacksmith shops, a carpenter shop, two stores, a tannery and a school house. This is the most extensive wood station on the road, having shipped over a thousand cords since March, and that by common people.

Six miles from Heiskell's Station is Powell's Station, with fifteen houses, a shop and a doctor's office. A school is connected with the station. We believe schools are organized in all the school houses mentioned in this article, except the house at Heiskell's Station, J. O. Manson's school having just closed there. The road has other stations, not mentioned here. Powell's is the first station out from Knoxville.

Boss Tweed's Exhibition of Weakness.

In an interview with a New York reporter on Friday afternoon, William H. Tweed revealed himself as follows:

"Reporter.—What do you think of re-pealing the charter?"

"Mr. Tweed.—Well, if they can show us that the people want to have it repealed, we'll repeal it; but I don't believe they do. I tell you, sir, if this man Jones (the editor of the New York Times) would have said the things he has said about me twenty-five years ago, he wouldn't be alive now. But, you see, when a man has a wife and children he can't do that kind of thing. (Clenching his fists.) I would have killed him."

"Reporter.—I wouldn't mind it."

"Mr. Tweed (unseating himself from the baluster).—Well, you see, I don't. I don't even read the papers. I'm only sick of the whole matter. I'm sick of being dragged into the mud by such scoundrels."

"Reporter.—I suppose you must be tired of public life, Mr. Tweed?"

"Mr. Tweed.—Oh, yes; I am sick of it. I wish I could retire to private life and have nothing more to do with politics. I'm sick of the man Jones wouldn't have dared to say anything, if I had no wife and children."

Mr. Bonner on the Milwaukee Trot.

(From the New York Ledger.)

Some of the daily papers have reported that Goldsmith Maid has trotted a mile in 2:17. Everybody knows that she never saw the day she could do that without running, but even if she had done it, it would leave her behind Dexter, for he trotted, in the presence of ten thousand people, in 2:16, although beaten in that race by a running horse, who made 2:15, and therefore got the record.

(From the Spirit of the Times.)

She will never be Dexter's equal, in our opinion, until she can, in a race with a trotter and running mate superior to her in speed, trot a mile in 2m. 16s., on the Fashion Course, and repeat in 2m. 17s.

How CONNOLLY WAS APPOINTED.—The Times says that originally the office of controller was elective, but the young Democracy being determined to run Matthew T. Brennan some time ago, with a prospect of his beating Connolly, the ring resorted to the trick of inserting a clause in the tax levy of 1870, abolishing the office of controller as an elective office, and authorizing Mayor Hall to appoint a controller for four years. The fact that such a clause had been smuggled into the tax levy was not known to a dozen persons till after the adjournment of the Legislature. The mayor was authorized to make the appointment within five days after the passage of the act, and before the people of New York knew of the act had been passed, Mayor Hall had made the appointment, and placed Richard B. Connolly at the head of the finance department for four years.

East Tennessee Items.

Officials in Chattanooga go for itinerant hogs and impound them. Wouldn't a pound pay here?

Burglars are honest in Chattanooga—they break open jewelry stores but don't steal anything.

An exclusive tobacco house will shortly be established at Bristol.

Gen. Mahone gets a salary of $25,000 per annum, and the Bristol Courier says he earns it. The Rogersville Reporter contains an account of the re-union of the "Hawkins Boys," who were the first to volunteer in the Confederate army from that county, in the 19th Tennessee Regiment. The affair was a most pleasant one, it is stated.
